on Lake Superior USA

The closest thing to an inland sea. Lake Superior, maintaining a steady bottom temp. just above freezing. I saw the lake for the first time in 1966, and except for a year or two, have never been further away from her than two or three hundred miles.

I have looked at you, sailed on the big boats on you. Pulled buoys out of you for the winter. I have sung about you, and the heroes you created as you changed from the mirror and tranquility you are today, to a killer without mercy. However you are, you have kept me close as if I am at once a chronicler and an accomplice.
